ECKELS COMES TO DEFENSE OF "HIGH FINANCE" METHODS

Locisville, Ky. Oct. 4.—James H. Bekeis, president of the Commercial National Bank of Chicago, and former Controller of the Currency, was the principal speaker to-day at the annual convention of the Kentucky Bankers' Association. "Here of inte we have heard much talk of high finance." said Mr. Eckels. "I admit there have been some transactions unworthy of the name which reflected on the credit of the profession. But there is far more of conscience employed in the acquirement and use of wealth than of evil.

in the acquirement and use of wealth than of evil.

"It has become a fashion to denounce railroads and ask that the law be invoked to regulate the business of a dozen or a thousand men.

"No one would dare to invoke legislation to control the business of a private individual. Any attempt to legislate on such questions as are purely of a business nature and to take from the owner the virtual management of his business is a mistake which will bring national disaster.

"If the thoughtful citizen—I mean neither the partisan nor political demagagae-but if the thoughtful citizen will investigate he will learn that nowhere in the world do railroads do as much for so small a sum as in this country."

tions of the Missouri statutes as grounds for its cause. Section 1982 prohibits any railroad company, corporation or individual officer from exercising any degree of control over a parallel and competing line. Section 1982 prohibits an officer from holding office in a parallel and competing line. Both sections are explicit.

Concerning the method of financing wherehy minerity security holders dominate a system or several systems, the Ramsey party offers the following illustration:

A group of financiers obtains control of Exonomic securities of a Exonomic corporation. Then this group authorizes an insuance of the company's bonds and with the funis obtains similar central of another corporation. Then this group follows the same procedure in obtaining control of another corporation. In the case of competing lines, it is suggested traffic can be concentrated upon one road, resulting in large carnings. Upon the showing thus made, the value of securities is advanced and the securities are sold at a profit, after which the traffic is concentrated upon the other road. This in brief, is the basis of the proposed official action.

The Ramsey petition for an industrian will be heard to morrow morning by Judge Taylor. Mr. Bamsey has been instructed to appear in court as a witness.

General Solicitor Cochran of the Missouri Pacific and the Iron Mountain and General Solicitor Cochran of the Warnach conferred yesterday afternoon in Mr. Cochran's office on the injunction suit. Mr. Cochran's office on the injunction suit be made.
